first impressions THAT LAST

A welcoming reception area is a key component of a customer-facing business. It not only acts as a place for visiting guests to wait or pass-through, it is often their first impression of your organization. With that in mind, what kind of statement do you wish to make? Do you want to be perceived as bold and high-energy? Sleek and modern? Calm and comforting? This is the place to make your presence known within your office decor. Color schemes, seating configurations, carefully curated art and accessories . . . they all add up to a well-designed space that will make you stand out.

WARM AND “HOMEY” can still stand tough

The current trend in commercial design is to incorporate residential elements to add warmth to a space. While some elements that are reminiscent of a living room can create a comfortable environment for employees and visitors, it does require careful consideration as durability is always a requirement in commercial design. Always look for products that have met contract-grade quality standards to ensure you're purchasing furniture that will last for years to come.

GO WITH THE FLOW

It's important to have a clear idea of traffic flow as you are planning your floor plan. Know how your guests will enter and exit and make the area easily navigable.

Regardless of how much space you have to work with, the right reception furniture layout can create a pleasant, calming environment for visitors to your office. Your reception desk should be the focal point of your waiting area and easily viewable and accessible from the entrance. Have plenty of seating options for people to choose from depending on their needs. A combination of sofas and single armchairs will suit different sized groups comfortably.

functional & FRIENDLY

A large open space can give you the freedom to create different zones for differing needs. Comfortable lounge seating allows visitors to wait and relax for a few moments. Modular booths provide a quiet personal space for phone calls or a calming respite from an otherwise highly trafficked area. Spreading out the wealth of seating options can make all the difference for your visitors and employees.

take your SEATS

Reception area furniture gets frequent use, which means you have to consider wear and tear.

Because your waiting room is a high-traffic area, you'll need the seating to be sturdy enough to stand the test of time. Look for durable fabrics, solid frames, and easy cleanability features. That way, you won't have to repair or replace as often. If you still want to prioritize comfort, look for flexible seating with a bit more cushion and upholstery, at least for accent seating in addition to the sturdier options.

FRESH DESIGN

and natural complements

Natural lighting and decorative touches are important for creating the right kind of atmosphere for your guests. Soft, bright light creates a sense of calm and increases the appeal of the space. A few healthy plants can make a big difference because they look great, trap dust, muffle noise, and can help improve air quality. Adding plants to your waiting room can leave it feeling fresher and more aesthetically pleasing.
